Your Doctors in the News!

Dr. Estep and Dr. Boulden have been working with the Give Back a Smile Program, a charitable organization that teams with dentists to offer domestically abused women the chance to get back their beautiful smiles. Both of your Drs. at Atlanta Dental Spa have garnered thousands of dollars in sponsored materials and will be performing treatments on a very special, brave

In this Issue, you are going to learn some very important information about your overall health and well-being. At Atlanta Dental Spa we're not just about making you look spectacular on the outside. New research shows that your mouth can be an indicator for sickness and we're going to be vigilant in pursuing these health markers with you. To us, you are more than just a patient with great teeth; you depend on health care professionals to give you their best medical advice...so, we have some crucial news for you.

What if Healthy Gums Can Save Your Life?

Does a Healthy Mouth Equal a Healthy Body?

In short, the answer is most certainly yes. We have learned that your mouth can be an indicator for the overall systemic health of your body and that should be vitally important to all dentists and patients alike. What if your dentist visit could showcase some early marker for a larger illness? What if healthier gums improve the health of your heart?

Recent medical professionals are calling on dentists all over the country to take their practice past the point of just great smiles and good teeth. Studies suggest that flossing may add 7 years to your life and a healthy mouth can be a critical indicator of overall health. This is BIG NEWS because it is the most important information the dental world has received in recent years. These studies link your mouth's well being to the rest of you, including your heart.

Your Atlanta Dental Spa Doctors spent an important week in Scottsdale focusing on the very latest in this medical research. The results were astounding. We now know affirmatively that if you can get your gums healthy, you may just be saving your life. Here's the information we have so far:

New Treatment for White Spots Available

Now Available with Us

We are now offering ultra conservative treatment to fix white and brown spots on teeth. In some cases, these spots are visible from the time the teeth erupt. In other cases, the spots may show up after braces. If you or someone you know has white or brown spots on their teeth, we can eliminate them with Recalcification Treatment.
